

The Cider Mill is

a part of America's rich heritage of living off the land. Cider Mills were powered hand, water power, or horse-power, and were used to grind apples in the first step of making apple cider. Today, apple cider has an enthusiastic following in the form of cider festivals and new recipes.

The Cider Mill by MossCreek draws its life from the land as well. With the use of natural materials of wood, stone, and glass, the Cider Mill is the perfect small rustic home.
